AT BIRD'S MAMMOTH STORE.

Goods Sold On Reasonable Time, To Reliable Persons

The best apron Gingham at 7 cents per yard.

The best American prints at 6 1-4 cents per yard.

Cambrics only 5 cents per yard.

Come And See Us.

Mrs. Nettie Barber spent Thursday in Xenia.

Mrs. Bev. Andrew is in Cincinnati this week.

Go to Boyd's restaurant for a good meal, only 25 cents.

D. S. Ervin went to Columbus on business Wednesday evening.

The Misses Cushing, of Springfield, are visiting relatives at this place.

If you want a good lunch or a square meal go to Boyd's and try him once.

George Winter made a trip to Cincinnati this week, combining both business and pleasure.

A. C. Scanland, of Selma, was in Cedarville Wednesday to visit his sister, Mrs. M. Keys, who is quite sick.

Mr. Albert Ramby and daughter Bessie of Dayton spent Sunday with his little son and aunt Mrs. Robertson.

Mrs. Andrew Jackson, wife of Greene County's popular Representative, with her daughter, Miss Pearl, is spending the week at the Capital.

Mrs. S. B. Andrews and Mrs. J. Strouse, of Carrollton, O., were the guests of B. W. Northup and family this week.

Miss Lulu Smith entertained a number of her friends with a "tasty pulling" Tuesday evening. In addition quite an interesting time was had with crokinole, tiddledy winks, etc.

The Anderson, Ind., Bulliten says: "Will D. Nesbit, city reporter of the Anderson Daily Herald," has a neat little card he passes out now in introducing himself as a news gatherer. Mr. Nesbit seems to have caught on in Anderson.

Ed. Smith and Spence Shepherd have for the past two or three weeks been making things lively in and about Covington, Miami county, selling Wood's automatic washer. The Covington Gazette speaks of them in the highest terms.

Miss Anna Chew, a graduate of the Boston School of Oratory, and professor of elocution at Oxford college, will give an entertainment under the auspices of the Y. W. G. T. U. of this place Friday, April 24th. Her readings include dramatic, pathetic humorous, character sketches, dialect selections, etc., which she renders with the skill of a perfect artist, as all who have had the pleasure of hearing her attest. The musical members of the program will be furnished by the Y. W. G. T. U.

The "Y" parlors were well filled Monday evening by guests who were entertained by an interesting program arranged for the occasion by the members of that society. Several entertaining papers were read. A couple of recitations elicited much applause. The music added materially to the evening's enjoyment.

Rev. Dr. McAllister, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will speak in Ervin & Williamson's Hall on Friday evening April 17 at half past 7 o'clock, on "A Tour through Bible Lands"—Egypt, Syria and etc. Those who come will be well entertained. All are cordially invited. A collection will be taken up for the benefit of missions.

On Saturday of last week the friends of Mrs. D. J. Shrodes gave her a very pleasant surprise in honor of her fifty-fourth birthday. An elegant dinner was served. There was present about thirty-five guests including Mrs. K. B. Rader, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McClure, of Springfield, Miss Fannie Ellis, of Xenia, and Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle, of Yellow Springs.

Joe Hanabery this week brought to the Herald office one of the greatest curiosities in the shape of an egg we ever saw. It is a large duck egg and was supposed at first to contain two yolks but upon being broken carefully it was found that inside the shell is another shell while the white of an egg separated it from the outer one. Hundreds of persons called to see the curiosity, and it was apparent to all that it was genuine as the outer shell was not broken sufficiently to have allowed the inner egg to have been placed there through any human agency.

Georgie Charters

The great and beautiful whistler and singer has decided to return to Cedarville in a short time assisted by a club of young ladies and gentlemen, and give a grand musical and social farce prepared by one of the finest writers and authors, now standing before the public, and of which will be patented for Georgie only. The plot is grand, comprising of facts of nature. The final ending of a high extravagant life. The fall to sin and disgrace by intemperance. Georgie will whistle her most select pieces, and give you some new songs, all of which she personates as she sings them. Those who do not hear the little genius will miss a rare treat, as she has given time and attention for this purpose. Georgie will convince the people of her first home and birth place of her wonderful attainment as a whistler, songster and actress. She invites the patronage of the community, and we hope she may be greatly appreciated as this will be the last time she can favor you, having had some flattering offers in the east of which she will be more than likely to except.

Respectfully
HAMILTON.

Dr. Yarnell, the experienced specialist of medicine, Ohio, who can be consulted again at the Cliff House the first of next month.

Difficult cases which have resisted the ordinary methods of treatment by the general physician are especially invited to call.

Twenty-five years' experience in the treatment of all diseases of the human system has made Dr. Yarnell the imperial master of these terrible maladies.

You do not have to tell him your ailments; he reads your complaints like an open book. Describe your regular and irregular habits without asking you a single question, and he prescribes remedies to meet the precise wants of each particular case.

Neurotic work! No excitement! No failure! No disappointment! When he takes a case he takes it to the cure.

If you have Catarrh of the Head, Throat, or Bronchi, Weak Lungs, Pains or Soreness in the Chest, Hayfever, Cough, or any affection of the Throat, or if you have a valuable time or waste the precious opportunity of a cure in worthless patent medicines or inexperienced practitioners, but apply at once to Dr. Yarnell, who in these diseases is a specialist and is engaged in their treatment every day in the year.

If your hearing is impaired, do not despair of a cure until you have consulted Dr. Yarnell for Catarrhal Deafness.

If you are suffering from the effects of Leprosy, or have a complication of disease, and do not know what is the matter, but feel wretched all the time, consult Dr. Yarnell.

Suffering women who have dragged on aching nerves and limbs up and down stairs for long years, months, and always in vain, and feel that they are tired and worn out, and are unable to walk, or stand, or sit, or lie down, may obtain a permanent cure by applying to Dr. Yarnell.

If you have any of those inveterate diseases, such as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, or any of those diseases, or any other venereal disease, or any other disease of the blood, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other disease of the system, or any other disease of the body, or any other disease of the mind, or any other disease of the soul, or any other disease of the spirit, or any other disease of the flesh, or any other disease of the bone, or any other disease of the marrow, or any other disease of the sinews, or any other disease of the nerves, or any other disease of the vessels, or any other disease of the organs, or any other WOODEN WATER PIPES.

An Interesting Article on a Topic of Great Importance.

Some weeks since a correspondent asked for information in regard to the durability of wooden pipes for conducting water underground. In the summer of 1873 my father laid common pump logs, made of white pine, to conduct water from the bottom of a cistern to a trough in a yard below. A stop-cock was placed at the end in the cistern and operated by a rod running to the top. In this way the lower end of the pipe, being left open, was exposed to the air, and several lengths next the trough had to be replaced several times; but four or five rods from the end, where the pipe was buried about four feet deep, it was found in the summer of 1889 (or after sixteen years), to be perfectly sound. At this point we attached galvanized iron pipe to conduct water into the basement of the new barn which stands near. I have not the least fear that the wooden pipe will not last as long as the iron. It is laid in heavy yellow clay; possibly in sandy or gravelly soil enough air might reach it to cause decay.

A description of our waterworks may interest some of your readers. The water is first pumped from a well into a large cistern by means of a wind-mill. The cistern is located on the hillside above the barn, so that the water is conducted into the basement, but, unfortunately, not high enough to enable it to rise above the floor of the horse-stable except when the cistern is full. We have a common pitcher pump to raise the water for the horses. In the covered yard or "cow's bedroom" there is a large trough with a self-acting valve which always keeps the trough full. I have attempted to show the arrangement in the sketch, Fig. 1. I intended when we first put in the pipings to get a valve with float, etc., at the plumber's; but when I found the price was $6, I concluded either to make one myself or get along without the luxury. I took a common stop-cock and made a lever of three-eighths-inch iron to fit it, and stapled the end to a block of pine eight inches square and about a foot long. This arrangement has been in use nearly a year, and has always kept the trough full, and has not been touched. Of course, the cattle had to be fenced away from the end of the trough containing the valve. A fence is built around the trough so that the cattle cannot get into or foul the water, but have to put their heads under a two-by-six-inch plank to reach it. See Fig. 2.—Cor. Rural New Yorker.

END OF WATER TROUGH.

How to Manure for Onions.

As to manures, onions are great feeders and like something to select from. I advise applying at least ten cords of barnyard manure per acre, or its equivalent. Farmers in the vicinity of Boston use twenty cords of stable manure, but I think it better to use half the quantity of manure, and the other half in commercial fertilizers, or, cheaper yet, to use all fertilizer. The latter can be applied at any period of growth, but there is danger from using a phosphate continuously. In Bermuda the onion growers use part sea manure and part commercial fertilizers. One of my neighbors uses ten cords of a mixture of barnyard manure, sea manure and night soil, a very concentrated manure, probably equal to double the quantity of ordinary barnyard manure. I recommend the application of three hundred pounds of nitrate of soda per acre just as the crop begins to bottom; or, if the crop looks feeble, a complete fertilizer may be used. In all farming a good deal of manure seems to be misapplied, and I suggest the use of less manure and more of commercial fertilizer.—J. J. H. Gregory, in Farm and Home.

The animals that are to have young should be given good, clean, airy, comfortable quarters. That fact ought to commend itself to everybody.

FARMYARD MANURE.

The Most Effective Plan of Preventing Loss of Strength.

It is evident that farm or animal manure must be the principal dependence for keeping up fertility of the soil. The use of commercial fertilizers and green crops, as aids, is often advantageous, but they should not be relied upon exclusively. It is an item of considerable importance to make, save and apply all the manure possible; but at the same time it is also an item to do the work as economically as possible.

The soluble parts of the manure are much more valuable, and for this reason it is important to use plenty of material as absorbents, so as to retain all of the liquid and readily soluble portions. For the same reason it is also important to see that the manure is properly protected from rain, as this causes a loss by leaching and evaporation, and if manure is thrown into "hills" to rot, it should be protected from leaching rains.

Another item in rotting before hauling out is that during fermentation manure throws off organic matter in a gaseous form and unless considerable care is taken in handling there will be loss of nitrogen.

Some use gypsum, spreading in layers as the manure is thrown on, in order to assist in retaining the nitrogen.

The most effective plan of preventing loss is to haul the manure and scatter directly on the fields where it is needed. If the ground is plowed there will be a very small loss of plant food in any form. On steep hillsides where there is a strong liability to wash, there may be some loss; on land that is reasonably level there will be little if any loss, the valuable parts being taken up and retained by the soil. Of course well rotted manure contains a larger per cent of soluble matter, and will be of less benefit to the succeeding crops than when applied fresh. It requires time to thoroughly rot manure whether in piles in the yard, or in the field. There is more work and more risk of loss by piling and rotting before hauling out, and especially so if left without protection; but if properly handled it will decay in less time. The more thoroughly the manure is rotted and fined the more readily it can be incorporated with the soil, and the better the immediate results secured. Which-ever plan is followed care must be taken to avoid waste, and at the same time lessen the cost of handling.—Prairie Farmer.

GOOD PRUNING SHEARS.

Just the Thing for Raspberries, Currants and Gooseberries.

The accompanying picture represents a pair of pruning shears both open and shut which I have used for two years with entire satisfaction. I am sure I can do more work with them than with anything I ever tried. They come very handy for pruning all kinds of bush fruits, such as raspberries, blackberries, currants and gooseberries.

PRUNING SHEARS FOR BUSH FRUITS.

These shears cut both ways—that is, when the handles are open and when shut. The only drawback to their use, perhaps, is the price. The least I can have them made for is $2.50.—Popular Gardening.

Labeling and Registering Trees.

Many orchardists and owners of fruit gardens have set out fruit trees to some extent during the past autumn; the labels giving their names being exposed to wind and weather during the whole winter, have either become detached or defaced before another year, says the Country Gentleman. Sometimes the names are neglected for a few years, and when the new kinds begin to bear, then for the first time it is discovered that they are gone. There are two easy remedies for all this trouble: Register the names in a common account book, which you frequently turn to, and put on zinc labels, which we have described on some former occasions, consisting merely of a narrow strip of sheet-zinc, a few inches long, with the narrow end passed once around the side branches. The name, written on the slightly rusted face with a common lead pencil, will last a life time.

The Best Is None Too Good.

No breeder or farmer should believe or accept as a fact that any breed of swine or any individual animal is perfect, says the National Stockman. The force or strength of the meaning of the word "thoroughbred" increases with the improvement of the quality of the animals. No one realizes the worth of the adage that "the best is none too good" with more force than the true fancier and breeder. He is always looking for his ideal higher type and when found will pay fabulous sums for it.

Patent medicines differ—One has reasonableness, another has not. One has reputation—another has not. One has confidence, born of success—another has only "hopes."

Don't take it for granted that all patent medicines are alike. They are not.

Let the years of uninterrupted success and the tens of thousands of cured and happy men and women, place

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription on the side of the comparison they belong.

And there isn't a state or territory, no—nor hardly a country in the world, whether its people realize it or not, but have men and women in them that're happier because of their discovery and their effects.

Think of this in health. Think of it in sickness. And then think whether you can afford to make the trial if the makers can afford to take the risk to give your money back as they do if they do not benefit or cure you.

THE HERALD.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY NEWSPAPER.

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1891.

W. H. BLAIR, Editor and Prop'r

PRICE $1.25 PER ANNUM.

Bismarck was born on April Fool's day. A very serious joke for Denmark, Austria and France.

The Kingdom of Italy bears a strong resemblance to a boot. Perhaps that is the reason it does so much "kicking."

The Springfield woman who married a chiropodist, who had visited her on professional business, had him at her feet even before he had fallen in love with her.

A philosopher on the Chicago Herald uses quite a bit of space in saying that people have too much to say. He illustrates the truth of his proposition in the making of it.

A house in Kingston, Mass., which was standing in 1694, was burned this week. A structure which had braved two centuries of summers and winters deserved a better fate.

In the present diplomatic rupture with Italy, there is no American, whatever his politics, who does not believe that the present Secretary of State is just the man for the occasion.

Minnesota seeks to purify her Senatorial elections with a little legislative chloride-of-lime. A bill is pending in its General Assembly which reduces the expenses of candidates to 1,000.

Sixteen South Carolinians chased a poor fox 42 miles the other for the pleasure of killing it. As long as men enjoy the putting to death of their weaker relatives they can stand more civilization.

The editor of the Montpelier, (O.) Leader observes a philanthropic spirit among office-seekers. It says: "The woods are full of candidates this spring all ready to shake hands and find out about the health of your family."

It was Charles J. Bonaparte, a near relative of the French Bonapartes, who evicted a sick woman into the rainy streets of Baltimore the other day. As far as heartlessness is concerned, he is not unworthy his illustrious kin.

The Boston Herald says that no one was ever able to find out what the politics of the late Rev. Howard Crosby was. But everybody knows that he was a positive force for good in the world, and with that information about a man details can be dispensed with.

A Baltimore man who was his own lawyer has just gone to the penitentiary for two years. But this is not necessarily a discredit to his powers as an advocate. Perhaps if someone else had defended him, he would have gone ten years.

Herr Joseph Frick, one of the oldest and most blatant anarchists of the time, died in Pittsburgh the other day. He had been undermining established institutions with his mouth for more than a half century. He is a citizen now of the only absolutely pure democracy there is in this world, and has found the equality for which he yearned.

Rev. Minot J. Savage recently said: "If I was a dictator of this country I would shut up the saloons so tight that nothing but a charge of dynamite would open them. I would open the woods, the parks, the museums, and the libraries, and all the roots and uplifts refine." If Mr. Savage was noctator of any country he would find that he would have to adapt himself to a great extent to the prevailing tastes of the people who acknowledged his way. The world cannot be reformed by any stroke of legislative or executive power. Human nature rises to higher level only by slow process, and governmental edict can no more hurry them than they can hurry the acorn or the sapling into the gnarled and towering oak.

The Fear of All.

John Ziner Undertaker, of Jamestown, says: "I never had a worse cold in my life. Two nights I never slept a wink for coughing—After three doses of your grand old Parian Cough Syrup was entirely relieved and never enjoyed a better night's rest in my life. Can cheerfully recommend it to the world as the Fear of all Cough Syrups. Sold by B. G. Ridgway."

SPECIALIST OR SMATTERER?

Does it Pay to Take Up a Special Line of Professional Work?

We often hear it said of a dabbler in music, or in art, or in science: "Oh, she only knows enough of that thing to talk about it!" and the words imply a sneer. From one point of view it is a trivial attainment, and perhaps the sneer is deserved if the knowledge has been acquired simply to furnish a subject of conversation, although to be conversant with even the jargon of a study is better than to remain totally ignorant concerning it. Besides, she who knows the terminology of music or art sufficiently to talk about either intelligently can hardly fail to pick up scraps of information occasionally. The very fact that a woman has cared enough for a topic to induce her to trouble herself to learn its phrases, argues the possibility of her appreciating further knowledge, says Harper's Bazar.

After all, the matter resolves itself into the question: For what purpose is study, general or particular, pursued? Is it not to widen the views, to strengthen the mind, to deepen the sympathies? Cannot these objects be as well achieved by general as by particular reading or study? Since one cannot go to the bottom of everything, can she not be well enough educated to gain enjoyment for herself and others by taking such selected knowledge as comes in her way? It is not necessary to be an Italian scholar to be able to read and appreciate the "Inferno," nor need one know Greek before she can become familiar with the "Iliad." Translations, collations and anthologies are meant for the help of those whose other duties preclude their going to the fountain head for their instruction and their enjoyment.

As the travel of current thought is toward specialties, let the young student just equipping for her life's work fit herself for labor after the fashion of the day. But the general reader whose opportunities for work have been limited need not despise her scattered knowledge. She possesses the advantage usually of having her capital available. She can utilize her information in her writing and in her conversation after a fashion that is both helpful and entertaining to those with whom she is thrown. It may be debated, indeed, whether the general reader, the general student, does not do more to benefit and delight her kind at large than does the specialist who limits herself to one or two branches of study, who never reads a book that does not touch upon her specialty, who can discuss nothing but her hobby, and who too often makes a bore of herself to all but a few sympathizers. The one-sided woman has her uses, and they are important, but may not as much be claimed for her who is forced by events and environment to be a smatterer?

Sleeping on the Floor.

Beds are still strange places of furniture in Russia and many well-to-do houses are still unprovided with them. Peasants sleep on the top of their ovens; middle-class people and servants roll themselves up in sheepskins and lie down near stoves; soldiers rest upon wooden cots without bedding and it is only within the last few years that students in state schools have been allowed beds.

The Slaves of Chiapas.

A system of peonage, or slavery, is extensively carried on in Chiapas, Mexico, and its workings are novel and interesting as described in the Philadelphia Times. The slaves nearly all come from the middle class of Spaniards, and are not Indians, as is generally supposed. The usual custom is for a family who may have a boy or girl ten or fourteen years of age to take the child to some plantation owner or family of the first class and propose that it shall take a position as servant on condition that an advance of ten or fifteen dollars is made to the parents. The contract also generally stipulates that the child shall receive a certain amount as wages, and the sum shall be placed to its credit until the money advanced has been paid, when the child will again be free. As the child grows older and becomes able to earn more money its parents, so it happens in nearly every case, apply for more money, thus piling up the debt. When the child becomes of age it generally asks for money for its own personal use, and thus bound to its master, it must continue in slavery until the debt is paid.

FIELDS' HOTEL, CEDARVILLE, OHIO.

AN IN-CANT-ATION.

You can lead a horse to water, but you cannot make him drink; You can send a fool to college, but you cannot make him think;
You may keep your daughter unmarried, but you cannot make her marry; But you can't make a man love you, if he doesn't love you.

You can never make a farmer of a boy who loves the sea, Though you may make him grow and plant and make his hands and feet; It's no use to swear and bluster because your only son Prefers the girl he met in the bar to your selected one; You might as well switch off that track, for love is lord of all, And, besides, it's more than likely that you know how 'tis yourself.

You cannot make a citizen, let him be black or white, Of the man who doesn't know enough to cipher, read and write.
You cannot change the rooster's strut, nor make the livers crow, Though you may honestly believe it would be better so.
You cannot make a person of the stage-struck, Romeo-lad; And if you ever do succeed, you'll wish you never had.

There is only one thing madder, and that's to have to see The name of your neighbor's nunkunk falsified with M. D.
But all these things, and more beside,
we may expect to bear, Until the nunkunk kills us, and the Romeo says the prayer.
—Eleanor Kirk, in Pack.

AUNT CLARA'S DOLLY.

She Left Her as a Legacy to Her Two Orphaned Nieces.

MYSTER MOL-LIE and I were born in the town of Sheldon, in middle Tennessee.
Father died in the spring of 1880; mother followed him a month later, and then Mol-
lie and I were alone in the world. Father had been a milliner and of course died poor. All of our possessions consisted of a small house and about an acre of ground in Sheldon, but the long period of ill health of our parents, together with the funeral expenses, had put a three hundred dollar mortgage on the property, so we could hardly say the roof that covered us was our own.

Mollie was but sixteen, I was four years her senior. Being well educated, I succeeded in getting the public school in our town, and, though the pay was small we managed to live on it. Mollie was determined should keep at her studies for a year or two more. Somehow we couldn't save a cent to pay on that mortgage, and it kept growing larger all the while. One day John Easton, the man who held it, came over.
He had just returned from school. He said:

"Miss Alice, I thought I'd call and tell you I can't carry that mortgage any longer. I need the money. It was due last fall, but I thought I'd let it run as long as I could, but I must have the money the 1st of October. If I shall have to foreclose, which I should mightily hate to do. Times have been so hard with me the last year or two that I must have it." The interest added to the mortgage will swell the amount to $420 October 1st.

Now, I couldn't see for the life of me how we were ever going to pay that money. It seemed that we must lose our home, and this night I told Mollie all about it.

"Well, Alice," said Mollie, "I'll have to quit school and go to work. I can't afford to stay here, but what work could you get to which we could save money enough to pay that mortgage by October 1st? I can't see any other way, you stopping your studies, or I making the old home good, you must. I'll have to quit school, for the party who owns that mortgage will not wait."

Of course we had a crying spell over the prospect before us. We had never before understood that we had a mortgage on our home, and, in a moment, and indeed to have it pass into other hands. The next evening when I came home from school I found a letter there that Mollie had brought from the school.
It was from Aunt Clara, a rich widow.
She was the only relative we had, and on October 1st she was to die.

my father's old maid sister, and had lived in Nashville all her life. Now she was an old, old woman. She had visited us once or twice while father was alive. The letter read:

"My dear Alice, I am writing to you because I have some money enough to pay off that mortgage on your home.
I found Aunt Clara in a humble cottage near the depot. She was evidently near death's door. Poor old soul! She had been for years an invalid, it seemed, and all the money she had laid by in her youth her later years had found in for. She lived alone in the cottage with Aunt Dolly, an old rheumatic negress whom she had bought twenty-five years before. When Aunt Clara was a younger woman Dolly had belonged to a Mrs. Bacon, with whom Aunt Clara boarded. Mrs. Bacon died suddenly and everything she had was sold at auction. Dolly had become attached to my aunt, and begged so hard that she buy her that my aunt actually paid the last dollar she had in the world for her. Then she rented the cottage, and there my aunt and Dolly had lived for twenty-five years, and grown old together as mistress and slave. But very little Dolly knew about slavery. I knew it would have been hard to have old which was mistress in the cottage.
Aunt taught in the public schools for a number of years, and Dolly cooked, took care of the cottage and sold hot coffee, sandwiches, pies, cakes and apples at the depot. Her round, black face had been a familiar sight there for many years. My aunt's health had been such that she had ceased teaching fully ten years before and Dolly had proved the prop of her declining years. Aunt Dolly met us at the door.

"Bless your souls, honey! Is you da nieces ob my ole missus? You ain't come none too soon. She moans going to Hebbly sho." Tears were rolling down Aunt Dolly's cheeks. She took us directly to Aunt Clara's bedside.

"Annie—Mollie," said my aunt, who lay propped up in bed, "I thank the Lord that He has permitted me to live to see you once more, though but to say farewell. Dolly has my will. I have left you everything I had, though, my dears, that is but little. For years I have been an invalid. There are some railroad shares which are worth nothing now, but in time they may be.
The greatest treasure I leave you is my faithful Dolly. Be good to her and take care of her as she has taken care of me in my old age."

The next day Aunt Clara quietly passed away. Mollie and I had seen her but two or three times. We grieved over her death, but our grief was nothing in comparison with the grief of poor, heartbroken Aunt Dolly. I shall never forget how poor Dolly sunk on her knees at the bedside: "Mars Jesus, is you got my missus? I know you is, for dar ain't no mo' like her.
Is you gwine take black Dolly long, too? Won't she need me ober dar?
Please, Jesus, take Dolly long!"

She was inconsolable. The second day after Aunt Clara's death we laid her at rest in the cemetery at Nashville. Her will, as she said, put us in possession of her all, which consisted of the furniture in the cottage, the worthless railroad bonds, $124 in money and poor old Aunt Dolly. Dolly didn't want to leave Nashville, but we thought it best to take her away for a time. So we persuaded her to pack what she would need in a trunk of her old mistress, and told her she could come back in the fall if she wished. So we went back to our home in Sheldon and left the cottage looking up. I resumed my school and Mollie her studies. I had taken most of the $124 aunt left to pay the funeral expenses and got us back to Sheldon.
Aunt Dolly assumed care of the house and the first thing I knew she was hobbling down to the Sheldon depot two or three times a day with a huge basket of sandwiches, cake, pies and coffee.
She never asked me for any money, and I thought she must make enough to buy the material, but when at the end of the month I went to the grocer and butcher to pay our bill he said: "You don't owe anything. Aunt Dolly has paid it all."

I was surprised, for we had lived better than ever before. Dolly was a splendid cook. She was always talking of old missus. I often saw her stop cooking, go to her trunk, take out a photograph of Aunt Clara, add talk to it as though Aunt Clara was there in person.

Time wore on till the 1st of October arrived. The mortgage was foreclosed, and the next day our home was to be sold at auction. That night after supper Mollie and I were sitting in the front parlor crying when Aunt Dolly came in.

"Dar now, you chillen, I knowed anticipate de matter. What is it, honey?
Tell ole Dolly."

"So I told her all about it," said Mollie, "hundred and twenty dollars!
Dar now, ain't it honey?"

"Yes, Aunt Dolly, it's a great deal when we need it and have nothing."

"Hible on a minute, honey," and she went hobbling out. Pretty soon she came back carrying a bundle in her arms. She knelt down on the carpet and unrolled it till she came to two of her old missus' stockings, filled with something and tied at the top. She untied them and emptied on the floor our longed-for gold, a shining heap of gold and silver coin.

"I was all saved from sellin' dem stockings, an' cakes, an' pies, an' bottles, an' apples for de past twenty-five years. I was all for de ole missus when she needed it. But she never need it now, and the tears started from dear old Dolly's eyes. "Now, honey, it's yours. Is dar enough?"

"Oh, Dolly!" we both exclaimed, "we can't take your money."

"Hush, chillen, hush. Is I belong to you?"

"No, no, Aunt Dolly," and we were both crying harder than before, "we belong to you." And somehow we got mixed up and our arms were around Aunt Dolly's neck.

"Well, count dem, honey, count dem." And we counted out $1,200. There were coins there that had not seen the light of day for twenty-five years. The next day we paid off the mortgage.
Shortly after Dolly wished to go back and visit the cottage, and we locked our house and returned to Nashville.
The Sunday after we arrived there we three visited the cemetery. Aunt Dolly sunk on her knees by the side of her

"NOW, HONEY, IT'S YOURS."

old missus' grave and bowed her head on the green sod that covered it.

"Here's Dolly, ole missus; here's Dolly.
Mars Jesus, won't you take me long?"

We heard a few sobs, but did not disturb her till we thought it was time to go. I put my hand on her shoulder.

"Aunt Dolly, dear Aunt Dolly," she did not hear me. Jesus had taken her long, too. We laid her at rest beside her mistress. At her head is a marble slab on which is inscribed:

"Aunt Dolly, Faithful and True."

The next year our railroad shares brought us $6,000. We often visit the grave of Aunt Clara and dear old Dolly, and it's hard to tell over which grave the tears flow most freely. —H. E. Scott,

THE SCIENCE OF FAIRY TALES.

Legends and Fables Descended from Romantic Antiquity.

The comparative mythologists have begun to turn their attention to fairy tales. It is a fascinating subject, and some of the conclusions reached are highly interesting, whether or not we accept the scientific and historical significance imputed to fairy lore.

The investigators find fairyland very human in its organization. Its inhabitants marry, sometimes among themselves, sometimes into mankind. They have children born to them, and they require at such times female assistance.
They steal children from men, and leave their own offspring in exchange for the so-called changelings. Their females sometimes become captive to men, but such unions are not lasting, for, at the first opportunity, the female fairy returns to her own land, and her husband must follow her there if he would regain her.

On the other hand, the mortal who enters fairyland and partakes of fairy food, is spellbound; he cannot return, at least, for many years, to the abodes of men. Among their human traits, it is observed that fairies are grateful to men for benefits conferred, and resentful for injuries. They never fail to reward those who do them a kindness, but their gifts usually have conditions which detract from their value.

Their chief distinction from man is their possession of unbounded magical powers. They appear and disappear at will. They make a long time seem short and a short time long. They cast spells over mortals, and keep them spellbound for ages. All these customs and powers are imputed to the fairy folk wherever traditions about them are preserved. Such legends and beliefs bear witness to a remote antiquity.
They have come down to us from prehistoric times. It seems probable that all of them rise out of the doctrine of spirits, the doctrine of transformations, and the belief in witchcraft, held by savage tribes. —N. Y. Ledger.

Dancers in Tibet.

Dancing enters into the great many of the religious ceremonies in Tibet, where the inhabitants spend a great part of their time in worship and its attendant festivals. Prince Henry of Orleans, eldest son of the duke of Chartres, recently returned from a journey of exploration in Central Tibet.
With M. Bonvalot, the noted explorer, and a company of guides and servants, he crossed the desolate country between Lob Nor and Tengri Nor, narrowly escaping loss among the glaciers.
In Lhasa, the sacred capital of Tibet, which they reached after many hardships, they saw many religious dances. The most striking of these was danced by masked priests, who were accustomed to flagellate themselves.
Despite the fact that Prince Henry was announced as a person of high degree, he got an occasional look with the robe worn by his subjects and had to bow near the dancers. —N. Y. Journal.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

RUM AND LONGEVITY.

Total Abstinence Calculated to Prolong Human Life.

There is no doubt but that under the more favorable conditions of modern civilization the average span of human life is lengthening. We have more comfortable houses, better warmed and ventilated than the habitations of our ancestors. Our clothing is better fitted to protect the body from winter's cold; we eat better and more wholesome food, and, greater than all, possibly, we pay far more attention to the demands of personal cleanliness and to the proper sanitation of our dwellings.

Those individuals whose lives are lengthened through these means form so numerous a class in the entire aggregate of humanity that the average expectation of human life has been lengthened; and this is shown by the tables of the "expectation of life" of the life insurance companies. Since these tables were first prepared by a careful collation of statistics of ages at death of large numbers of individuals, the average time of death has been postponed beyond the date set in these tables, prepared something like a century ago.

It has for many years been a controverted question whether total abstinence really is a factor in lengthening the lives of those who observe it. Everybody admits that great excess in the use of liquors shortens life. The fact is too patent to common observation for anyone to deny it successfully. But the position has been maintained by many that the moderate use of liquors is beneficial, and to some extent aids in prolonging life itself. The large amount of data necessary to settle this question has never been accumulated until last year, when an English life insurance company made public the statistics which it had been for a number of years gathering upon this one point.

This company had been in business for twenty-five years, and has, for that period, kept two sets of records of the persons insured in it—the one composed of total abstainers, and all other risks in the other. As is well known, no life insurance company accepts risks on the lives of heavy drinkers; and this company excluded also from this record list all persons engaged in the liquor traffic.
Hence we have, in these two records, a comparison between total abstainers and "moderate drinkers"—the very class for whom it has been claimed that liquor was always not harmful, and often directly beneficial. The results collected by the company afford us the first reliable data for determining the action of moderate drinking upon the length of human life.

For the five years ending December, 1888, the above mentioned company insured 4,507 lives in the "total abstinence section," and 6,709 in the "general section," as that embracing moderate drinkers is termed by the company.

In the "total abstinence section," the deaths were only 57 per cent. of the number of deaths to be expected according to the usual tables of mortality. In the "general section," the number of deaths were 79 per cent. of the number to be expected from the mortality tables.

This gives, therefore, the astonishing result that total abstinence gives 17 per cent. advantage in length of life over moderate drinking; or, to take another view of it, it prolongs the lives of those who follow it to that extent.

It may be said, however, that these figures are not absolutely conclusive.
We admit that they are not, as regards the exact average amount of prolonga-tion of life; but there can be no escape from the conclusion that even moderate drinking shortens life, and that one who indulges in that habit is much less likely to live to an advanced age than is a total abstainer.

This is confirmation of the view of the most advanced medical authorities that alcohol is, under all circumstances, a poison, and that its effects are proportioned to the amount taken into the system and the frequency of the dose.
This position has long been taken by the Bible, and these statistics afford a fresh proof of its soundness. Another interesting fact in connection with the matter is the report of the medical examiner of the above-mentioned company, who says that in the examination of many thousands of applicants he has found that total abstainers, as a rule, exhibit a much cleaner condition of the tongue, resembling, indeed, that of a young child. His observations have also led him to concur with the late Harold Liebig in affirming that total abstainers eat more than moderate drinkers. This view depends upon the fact that liquors in the system retard the processes of tissue change, and the worn-out particles of the body are not gotten rid of as rapidly as they would normally be.

So numerous are the stock arguments used to bolster up the use of rum as a beverage falls to the ground, never to be reconstituted. While it is true that some very old people have used it in moderation all their lives, these comparatively few are not likely to be for the rest of mankind. Probably if such cases were investigated closely the fact would be clear that they lived so long not because of their indulgence in rum, but in spite of it. There can be no doubt in view of the careful observations made by this English insurance company, and the deductions drawn therefrom, that for the great mass of humanity the only safe rule as to rum is: "Don't touch it." It is not harmless, as the friends of total abstinence should see to it that the facts in the matter shall have all possible publicity. —Toledo Blade.

COFFEE INEBRIETY.

Drunkennes Resulting from Excessive Coffee Drinking.

Cases of drunkennes resulting from the use of tea and coffee have been frequently reported, and several have been mentioned in medical journals in which the victims of tea and coffee inebriety had suffered from delirium tremens as a result of their pernicious practice.
Dr. Mandel, of Berlin, has been making a clinical study of coffee inebriety. His studies were carried on chiefly among the women of the laboring classes in Easten and vicinity. He recently published a brief account of his researches.
The victim of coffee inebriety is one of the most miserable of human beings.
He is low spirited, sleepless, suffers frequent attacks of headache, which are relieved by coffee, but speedily return.
His muscles are weak, his hands tremble, he has inability and aversion for work, his heart action is feeble, he suffers from palpitation and great pain in the region of the heart. The complexion is sallow, hands and feet are cold, the face wears an anxious and pained expression. The patient suffers from a great variety of dyspeptic symptoms, from inflammations of various sorts, and often acquires the red nose which is generally considered characteristic of alcoholic inebriety, and hence called the rum-blossom.

Many of these distressing symptoms are temporarily relieved by stronger doses of coffee, only to return when the effect of the stimulant wears off.
Dr. Crothers, in referring to these researches, calls attention to the fact that coffee drunkennes is increasing in this country, and that "the coffee drinker, after a time, turns to alcohol, and becomes a constant drinker. In other cases opium is taken as a substitute. Coffee inebriates are more common among the neurasthenics, and are more concealed because the effects of excessive doses of coffee are obscure and largely unknown. Many opium and alcoholic cases have an early history of excessive use of coffee, and are always more degenerate and difficult to treat." —Good Health.

LOCATION OF THE SALOON.

The Kind of Business That People Don't Want Next Door.

There is a world of suggestion in the fact that very few men can be found even among those who uphold the liquor traffic in general, and who vote for its perpetuation, who are willing to have a saloon planted near their own doors. It must be a cause of sad and painful surprise to a poor and gulleless saloon keeper, who has been astained in his business for years largely by the votes and influence of a class of eminently respectable and well-to-do people, to find how much he is not wanted when he attempts to transfer his place of business into the midst of his eminently respectable and well-to-do advocates and sympathizers. It was the lamented Artemus Ward who said that after long experience he had found that the only comfortable place to have a bill was on some other man.
So the general feeling seems to be that the only good location for a saloon is next to some other man. The situation is such, however, that, as a rule, only those who have wealth and influence are able to dictate the location of saloons; to put them next to some other man. It is of little avail for the poor and humble dwellers in the tenement districts to protest against the saloons. No one cares how many rum-shops are thrust upon them. They who are the weakest and least able to withstand the temptations of the grog-shops must be made to suffer their vicious and contaminating presence whether they will or no. —Christian at Work.

in fact, the only kind of business that can be called a 'trade.' The reverse is the case with the manufacture, sale and consumption of strong drink."
